Run-on sentences for cutting

To do this activity, have students first cut the sentences strips. Then, they cut each sentence apart where the break between the two thoughts should be. Next, they glue down the first part on to construction paper, then add what they need to correct the run-on (either a period, or a conjunction like and, or, but). Finally, they glue the second part down and capitalize the first letter of the new sentence, if necessary. I made this activity with kid-used language so they can start to see how to fix their own work as well.
